INDO-CHINA BORDER CRISIS

LANGSON IN DANGER

Parls, Oct. 18. Victminh guerillas, after octhe French frontler fortress of Dong Dang, were reported to be massing today for an attack on Langson, the chief remaining French post guarding the China road.

The French evacuation of the 75-year-old stone fortiers? of Dong Dang, the fifth bas tion to be abandoned within a month, has left the way open for a direct attack on Langton, 10 miles away, Lameon's divilian residents have already been evacuated and the French were not expected to hold it.

M. Leon Pignon, the French High Commissioner in Indo-China, today informed the BRIGGS' PLAN the latert situation in the Northern State of Tonkin, M. Albert Cazier, the Minister of Information, hald in Parts.

The French High Command was proceeding with a methodical withdrawal of its isolated ! forces on the Northern border with China with the aim of regrouping them and occupying positions protected against encirclement, he added.

PROPOSAL REJECTED

Informed Paris circles raid that the 80,000 members of the programme should be broken French Union forces in the area were now expected to dig in about 80 miles couth of the mountainous frontler region, defending a line at one point only about 20 miles north or 'Hanol, the capital itself, -

The French National Assembly's Defence Committee today rejected a Communist proposal that the Government should open talks with Dr Ho Chi Minh, the leader of the Russianrecognized Vietminh rectionary Government,

Truman

TARRE real meaning of the Wake island man and General MacArthur is made more apparent by the President's broadcast to the United States. The issues of world peace or war are at stake and it was within such a framework that Mr Truman conducted his talks with MacArthur.

Korea, and the rest of Asia, pose this.

problem of world peace or war-bring the issue into sharper focus and make the whole question more and more urgent.

Therefore, whatever the details of the tion was global in perspective.

President Truman's challenging appeal to Soviet Russia became a natural corollary, pin-pointing the conviction that wherever else in the Far East or in Europe conflict broke out, its origins would be traceable to the machinations of the Kremlin. Mr Truman has never addressed himself so directly and firmly to Soviet Russia as in this broadcast. His words were weighty and his sentiments wholly reflective of the minds of the people who comprise the Western democracies. The strength of President Truman's speech rests in the fact that he made no attempt to be oratorical, even less rhetorical. He spoke for the common man in the language of the common man. Of Soviet Russin, Mr

Truman asked four things: that Russia live up to the principles of the United Nations Charter; that she join the rest of the United Nations in calling on the North Koreans to surrender immediately; that she lift the Iron Curtain and permit the free exchange of information and ideas with the Western world; that she join the efforts of the United Nations to establish a workable system of collective security.

And President Truman's conception of collective security is that it permits the elimination of the atomic bomb and the drastic reduction and regulation of all other arms and armed forces. Nothing in United Nations spearheads ran into the first heavy resistance in three days eight to 10 miles south and east of Pyongyang on Wednesday and were reported to have stalled at sundown in a race for the Red capital.

An Eighth Army report issued at 5.30 p.m. on Wednesday said the First Cavalry division hit the Communist defence line guarded by heavy machinegun, mortar and anti-tank gun fire and mines around Chunghwa on the main north-south highway into Pyongyang.

these four requirements can be construed as inimical or Machiavellian, but they contrast very sharply with Mr Vyshinsky's appeal-that the United States should cease its "tough" policy so that she and Russia and the rest of the wartime allies can once again "get together" and reach agreements to mutual benefit. If, in the mind of Mr Stalin and his Kremlin colleagues, the United States' policy on international affairs has become tough, it is because America has rejected the idea.

of appeasing a nation which has committed itself deliberately to a mailed fist and obstructionist policy. Moreover,

Russia has carried that policy to a point where, using Koren as the guinea-pig, she has experimented with challenging the authority of the United Nations. The result to Russia has been disastrous; to the United Nations, vindication. This is no time for Russia to make demands for a "new policy" on the part of the democracies, but the moment has arrived for a demand that Russia change her attitude and actions in the field of international relations. This is the feeling of all the nations who genuinely desire world peace, and President Truman, in his broadcast, was merely expressing this conviction on their behalf. Moreover, in associating his talks with MacArthur with the message he delivered to the Kremlin,

Mr Truman was emphasising that the United Nations did not intend, in the future, for any rintion to impose its expansionist designs on small countries.

Korea is the warning to Russin, or to any other nation which may harbour similar plans for the promotion of colonial imperialism. The alternatives to Russia are obvious: either she associates herself unreservedly with the principles and nims of the United Nations, or she makes herself an outcast-a self-confessed opponent to world peace. This is the meaning of President Truman's broadcast.

TOO MUCH WEALTH HAS LED TO THE NO ASHES TO FALL OF AMERICA'S TENNIS EMPIRE

Says CORNELIUS RYAN

New York. A sports empire is much like a political or military empire, and too much richness can lead to its downfall. So it was with American amateur tennis in 1950 as the USA lost the Davis Cup to Australia.

America's richness in the things that make for tennis supremacy had seemed so great a few years ago that it was a strong possibility that the USA never again would lose the Cup.

America had the proper climate for year-around tennis in Southern California and in Florida. In each state it had individuals and associations with money to spend on the development of players, which often can be a lengthy and expensive process as the players go from tournament to tournament, improving slowly. And America had thousands of young players from whom to choose, Lieutenant-General George E. Stratemeyer, commander of the Far East Air Forces, warned today it would be a serious mistake to use the Korean campaign as a model for planning future military operations.

The primary lesson the Army, Navy and Air Force should heed is that Korea could lead to "false conclusions" about how to fight a modern military power, General Statemeyer said in a United Press interview.
